Assemblies this week

October is Black history Month and our assemblies this week have been on this theme. We heard the story of Olaudah Equiano 1745-1797. He was a former slave who after buying his freedom moved to London and wrote the a book about his experiences as a slave. He then spent his life sharing his experience and working to achieve the abolition of slavery. His actions were crucial in spreading knowledge across Britain and led to the abolition of slavery. Thank you to Bonnie who told us about a horrible histories podcast all about Olaudah Equiano which lots of children wanted to listen to. The link is below or simply search on BBC sounds.

Open the book were in this week for a lively assembly about the story of David and Goliath.
